E.3.1	Does the board of directors/commissioners periodically review and approve the vision and mission and has done so at least once during the last five years? (i.e., between 5 - 12 members)	UK Code B.1 Supporting Principle states: The board should be of sufficient size that the requirements of the business can be met and changes to the board's composition and that of its committees can be managed without undue disruption, and should Not be so large as to be unwieldy. Most codes of corporate governance specify that the board should be of appropriate size but should Not be too large.	Yes		Annual Report 2020 pg. 69-79
E.4.2	Do independent, No- executive directors/ commissioners number at least three and make up more than 50% of the board of directors/commissioners ?	OECD PRINCIPLE VI (E)  In order to exercise its duties of monitoring managerial performance, preventing conflicts of interest and balancing competing demands on the corporation, it is essential that the board is able to exercise objective judgement. In the first instance this will mean independence and objectivity with respect to management with important implications for the composition and structure of the board. Board independence in these circumstances usually requires that a sufficient number of board members will need to be independent of management. The ASX Code recommends at least a majority of independent directors, while the UK Code recommends at least half of the board, excluding the Chairman, be independent directors. The minimum of three independent directors	No	One Independent Commissioner; as required by OJK rules	Independent Commissioner: Mr. Fauzi Ichsan

E.4.3	Does the company provide a definition of independence in its Annual Report?	OECD PRINCIPLE VI:  (E) The board should be able to exercise objective independent judgement on corporate affairs.  In defining independent members of the board, some principles of corporate governance have specified quite detailed presumptions for No-independence which are frequently reflected in listing requirements. While establishing necessary conditions, such 'negative' criteria defining when an individual is Not regarded as independent can usefully be complemented by 'positive' examples of qualities that will increase the probability of effective independence. OECD PRINCIPLE VI (E)  In order to exercise its duties of monitoring managerial performance, preventing conflicts of interest and balancing competing demands on the corporation, it is essential that the board is able to exercise objective judgement. In the first instance this will mean independence and objectivity with respect to management with important implications for the composition and structure of the board. Board independence in these circumstances usually requires that a sufficient number of board members will need to be independent of management.  The variety of board structures, ownership patterns and practices in different countries will thus require different approaches to the issue of board objectivity. In	Yes	Independent Commissioner is Independent of the management and major shareholder many instances objectivity requires that a sufficient number of board members Not be employed by the company or its affiliates and Not be closely related to the company or its management through significant economic, family or other ties. This does Not prevent shareholders from being board members. In others, independence from controlling shareholders or another controlling body will need to be emphasised, in particular if the extant rights of minority shareholders are weak and opportunities to obtain redress are limited. This has led to both codes, and the law in some jurisdictions, to call for some board members to be independent of dominant shareholders, independence extending to Nt being their representative or having close business ties with them.

E.20.3	Does the appointment and removal of the internal auditor require the approval of the Audit Committee?	Companies often disclose that they have an internal audit but, in practice, it is Not uncommon for it to exist more in form than in substance. For example, the in-house internal audit may be assigned to someone with other operational responsibilities. As internal audit is unregulated, unlike external audit, there are firms providing outsourced internal audit services which are Not properly qualified to do so. Making the identity of the head of internal audit or the external service provider public would provide some level of safeguard that the internal audit is substantive.
